BURIDO

Seoul, the city of island.

Before 1970, the area that now the Jamsil Sports Complex resides in was the BURIDO. The '浮里島' was named after the scene depicting that a head of the Island was only kept itself above water when the river rose. It was seemingly an island floated down the river. When it rained, the people living in the BURIDO moved to high ground built for escaping the flooding. Without rain, the BURIDO was normally connected to Jamsil through white sands, and the high ground became a shelter the village people gathered and they had a good time.

What is BURIDO?

There was a city of Islands around Han river, Seoul. Almost 30 years ago, the Han river had wide white sands and many Islands. Depending on the amount of water of Han river, a sandbank and a shape of the Island became wider or narrower. At times, an island was divided into two islands. A physical structure of the riverside of the past was a natural park.
